Voshell, of course, was playing in hi vein, hitting the ball with grea force and racing to the net at every as portunity. Many aces he scored on his service, which Baggs wa forced to return, if at all, with weak lob bat the champion nearly always "killed. The men's doubles brought out som spirited lawn tennis.

In the final round the new combination of Alexander and Bassford opposed the rock and the personification of perpetua motion on the court, relied on skilfull placed and timed lobs in returning the terrific smashes of Voshell and his part-

This gave Alexander his opportunity to go in to the net and bring off marvellously placed 'cross-court shots that almost invariably nicked the chalk lines.
